Gsh Biotech, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Is metal toxicity real? What s the research say? How do you confirm? Don t I need some expensive treatment? What benefits do I get from knowing this? I ve been at this medical practice thing a long time (28 years PLUS) and I can t tell you how many chronic migraine or severe fibromyalgia patients have come through my doors. I can help some of them a little, some a lot, but some I can t touch. I read a few papers, talked to some experts and an idea began to form (rare for me I guess). Most of these people looked like they were Chernobyl or Fukushima Survivors, with muscle wasting, horrible fatigue, trigger points and so forth. They looked like death warmed over as my mom says. So for the last year I ve been circling back and looking at their copper levels (non-ceruloplasmin-bound copper levels called the NCC) easier to look at than other heavy metals, but still acts somewhat as a proxy for those other more wicked metals. This approach, this book, is clearly not for everyone. Studies have shown that trigger points and fibro and vascular inflammation are all sometimes related to copper (NCC) levels being out of control. This is real. Many of my patients, these patients, who have high copper levels (NCC again) have gotten dramatically better when treated. The treatment is seriously cheap and so is the testing. The literature is fairly solid. Though it could be another metal but the treatment works pretty much for all metals. There s hope! It makes me smile. Who am I? My name is Dan Purser. I m an MD. I care for people in a practice here...
