HAMMIT1 , Vice-President, Frederick THE SECOND YEAR CLOSES The Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce has closed its second year. Organized two years ago in the midst of the world war by an optimistic group of citizens who realized the urgent need of a communit v clearing house for the civic, commercial and industrial activities of this borough, the Chamber has steadily expanded and developed until it now has a rapidly growing membership. large and attractive quarters, and more than a score ot active committees engaged on community problems. There were no established policies to guide the Chattiber s activities; these had to be determined. There were no statistics or compilation of data to serve as a basis of studies and conclusions; these had to be compiled. There was no well defined body of opinions on these civic and industrial problems; this had to be ascertained. So that during these two years the Chamber has h.ld the task of organizing itself, getting its bearings. collecting initial information oll a great variety of local quietions and issues, and trying to determine what are the important problems which a comnlunit v organization of this kind should attempt to solve. The Chamber cannot...
