Abbot, Esq., Bellevue High School, Virginia; Before the National Educational Association, in Detroit, Michigan, August 4th, 1874 A few days ago, while engaged in conversation with a gentleman of no mean attainments, and most amiable character, who had for some years been engaged in teaching, I was listener to the following remark: - A teacher s is a dog s life - of thankless drudgery and meagre pay. I shall enter some business, where, there is less to do and more to make. There was doubtless a fair proportion of truth in the sentiment, enough at least to give it an air of verisimilitude; and I confess for a moment to a sinking of heart, as the natural reflection forced itself upon me, that to such a vocation I had already devoted so many years, and was now committed beyond retrieval to the same dreary pathway through life. But a short time before, however, I had participated in a scene not unfamiliar, in character,...
