Excerpt from Camping and Its Relationship to Forest Soil and Vegetation Properties in South Carolina Camping is one of the most important recreational uses of the forests in South Carolina. It is an activity that is characterized by sustained, concentrated use which results in deterioration of soil and vegetation properties. This deterioration is a major problem for forest managers, for it reduces the quality of the recreational experience and results in higher maintenance costs. Camping use of the State s forests has doubled since 1970 and as more people utilize these environments for recreation, greater management problems can be expected to occur.
