During the past fifteen years there has been a great movement of biological research towards the problems of organic evolution, and particularly towards that phase of those problems which constitutes the subject currently known as genetics. Experimental breeding has become the order of the day, not alone in the laboratories of zoology and botany, but in the agricultural experiment stations and colleges everywhere. Research in a new field means the application of new methods. Nowhere has this been more true than in genetics. For a critical handling of many genetic problems, a thorough grounding in chemistry, physics, and mathematics as well as biology is really a necessity. In particular the widespread use of the biometric technique in biology and agriculture demands a clear understanding of certain fundamental mathematical principles.
