Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Specialized Grazing Systems: Their Place in Range Management Numerous other benefits are attributed occasionally to specialized grazing systems. They are said to improve distribution of animals, to prevent selective grazing, to foster closer supervision of livestock, and to permit incorporation of range improvement practices in the ranch management program, such as planned burning schedules, brush control, reseeding, and protection of new seedlings. Although these practices are or can be fostered by a grazing system, they do not require specialized grazing systems. They are valuable range improvement practices in themselves.
