New York: A. D. F. Randolph and Co. with the same preposterously unmeaning color and glitter. We have imagined, however, in glancing at Mr. Abbeys pretty little book, --call it the defect of judgment or the freak of a mind perturbed by this injurious business of tasting every sort of raw, unfermented rhyme, --that he was not quite just to himself, and that he could do better than he has done here. We are not sure that we expected him to produce anything finer; perhaps, from some absurd confusion of ideas, we had formed hopes of him in the line of expressive silence. Or, perhaps, it may have been Mr. Michell, and not Mr. Abbey, --we looked over their books simultaneously, as it were, --of whom we predicated a successful reticence; but at any rate we will say now that we believe either of them could achieve something quite pleasing in this vein, which is too little wrought by young poets. Will it be believed that we have hazarded this opinion without reading through Sybil of Cornwall, or The Lands End, or even St. Michaels Mount We must confess that we came to our conclusion concerning Mr. Michell after the perusal of the opening stanza of his Sybil, --Day slowly to his ocean fouch retires, Warm with his travel oer...
