CHAPTER VI REACTIONS OF THE METALS OF GROUP Mb Manganese, Mn Dry Reactions. --Manganese compounds, when heated in a borax bead in the oxidising flame, impart to the bead a violet or lilac colour. When heated in the reducing flame, the bead again becomes colourless. A more characteristic reaction is to fuse the manganese compound with KHO , or with NaO_3 and a little KN_3 or KC_3 upon a piece of platinum foil; the manganese undergoes oxidation, and a deep green-coloured mass is obtained, consisting of manganates of the alkali metals-- $\text{MnO}_2\text{Na}_2\text{CO}_3$ (from KC_3 or KN_3) $\text{Na}_2\text{MnO}_4\text{CO}_2$ Wet Reactions. --Of the common manganous salts, the chloride, $\text{MnCl}_2 \cdot 4\text{H}_2\text{O}$, and the sulphate, $\text{MnSO}_4 \cdot 5\text{H}_2\text{O}$, are soluble in water. In the crystallised state they have all a pink colour. Manganous salts which are soluble in water do not undergo atmospheric oxidation. NH_4HO , KHO , and NaHO produce a white precipitate of manganous hydroxide, $\text{Mn}(\text{HO})_2$. Insoluble in excess of the reagent, the precipitate quickly absorbs oxygen, and is converted into hydrated manganic oxide, $\text{Mn}_2\text{O}_3 \cdot \text{H}_2\text{O}$, having a brown colour. Freshly precipitated $\text{Mn}(\text{HO})_2$, while still white, is soluble in NH_4Cl ; therefore in the presence of NH_4Cl , manganous hydroxide is not precipitated by NH_4HO , and only incompletely by KHO or NaHO . The ammoniacal solution of the double chloride, however, is capable of absorbing oxygen just as the precipitated $\text{Mn}(\text{HO})_2$ 1 The manganic salts are extremely unstable in solution, and do not exist under the ordinary conditions of analysis. does, and the liquid quickly...
