XLIBRIS. Paperback. Condition: New. 74 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.2in. The status of my condition hadn't changed since I was admitted to the hospital. The only body parts I could move were my eyes and mouth. I just stared at the ceiling and floor, day and night. I would have to endure the discomforts if my nose, eyes, ears, or scalp itched. When I cried, tears would run down the side of my face and lodge in my ears. I tried not to cry too much. I couldn't sit up in bed. Instead of just praying and asking God for deliverance from my afflictions, I began questioning God, asking why this catastrophe had happened to me. I am a Christian and believed that Jesus died on the cross for my sins. I don't consider myself as the best person nor do I consider being the worst in this world. Suicidal thoughts were entering my mind. I couldn't hold a gun or knife with my hands, so the only way left was to refuse to eat. I wouldn't eat or take medication. As time passed, one Sunday night, the downpour of rain had erupted into a huge flood, besieging every nook and cranny of my mind. Jason and the children came to see me every Saturday and Sunday. He would call the hospital every night to see how I was doing. I couldn't answer the telephone; the nurses came in every night, about nine o'clock, to inform me that he had called and said hello. His calls were like clockwork. This particular Sunday was like any other Sunday. Jason and I talked, and he said he would call me when he got home. During the night, I called the nurse and informed her that people were bothering me. I became...
