Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: VDM Verlag Dr. Müller | Using Self-Organizing Maps in Evolutionary Computation | Exploration vs. exploitation is a well known issue in Evolutionary Algorithms. Accordingly, an unbalanced search can lead to premature convergence. GASOM, a novel Genetic Algorithm, addresses this problem by intelligent exploration techniques. The approach uses Self-Organizing Maps to mine data from the evolution process. The information obtained is successfully utilized to enhance the search strategy and confront genetic drift. This way, local optima are avoided and exploratory power is maintained. The evaluation of GASOM on well known problems shows that it effectively prevents premature convergence and seeks the global optimum. Particularly in deceptive and misleading functions it showed outstanding performance. Additionally, representing this search history by the Self-Organizing Map provides a visually pleasing insight into the state and course of evolution. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 120 gr | 76 pp.
