Morphologische Untersuchungen auf dem Gebiete der indogermanischen Sprachen: Volume 1.

By OSTHOFF, H. and BRUGMANN, K.,

Condition: New. Cambridge University Press, 2014. 320p. Paperback. Series: Cambridge Library Collection - Linguistics. Hermann Osthoff (1847?1909) and Karl Brugmann (1849?1919) were central figures in the circle of German scholars who rejected a doctrinal approach to the study of linguistics. They came to be known as the Neogrammarian school. At the core of their work was the theory that European languages, together with a subset of languages found in central and southern Asia, have a common origin in a single prehistoric language. They called this ancestor Indo-Germanic (known today as Indo-European) and claimed that its descendants are all related to one another by varying degrees of closeness. This six-volume elaboration of this thesis was published between 1878 and 1910. The preface to Volume 1 (1878) contains the 'Neogrammarian Manifesto' which states categorically that there are no exceptions in the laws of sound change, while new languages are formed only in relation to already existing languages.
