Consular Reports reports from consular the month of January action thereon: Transmitted to Other Departments.--The following officers (originals or copies) were transmitted during to other Departments for publication or for othtr FOREIGN REPORTS AND PUBLICATIONS. An English View of Germany s Industrial Development.--The London Times, of January 20, 1897, commenting editorially upon a recent investigation into the condition of arts and industries in Germany, says: Certain members of the royal commission on technical instruction, who, fourteen years ago, inquired into the condition of arts and industries in Germany, have made a further, though less exhaustive, investigation in order to note the changes that have occurred. Their conclusions are embodied in a letter to the Duke of Devonshire, published as a parliamentary paper, and signed by Sir Philip Magnus, Mr. Gilbert Redgrave, Mr. Swire Smith, and Mr. William Woodall, corroborative notes being appended by Sir B. Samuelson and Sir Henry Roscoe. They note, as everyone would expect, a steady advance of German industry in all directions. New manufactures have been started and old ones have been immensely developed since 1884. A few notes upon representative businesses appended to the report convey an idea of the activity which they found pervading all departments of German industry. The Badische Anilin und Sodafabrik, often quoted as a triumph of the intelligent use of chemical research, employed...
